According to reliable reports, Facebook plans to change the popular messaging App's strategy, weaken its end-to-end encryption and make use of user data. These attempts are rumoured to be the reason why Koum plans to leave the company. Prior to selling WhatsApp to Facebook for $19 billion in 2014, Koum and his co-founder, Brian Acton, vowed to preserve the independence and protection of its users' data. Koum wrote that the agreement wouldn't have happened if the messaging service "had to compromise on the core principles that will always define our company, our vision and our product". In 2016, WhatsApp doubled down on its pledge by adding encryption. However, it seems Facebook has an entirely distinct philosophy. It takes a pretty scientific approach to casino game design, with mathematical modelling and finely targeted player demographics feeding into the game from the word go. In other words it doesn't just roll out games; it creates games that are specifically designed to yield more or less predetermined results. casumo reviews
