In the year 2000, the tournament switched to the No-Limit Hold'em format that it has continued to feature to this day. The buy-in for the tournament began to increase as well, first to $1,500, then to $5,000, and finally to $10,000 in 2003. That was also the year of the first million-dollar prize pool, and the first time a foreign player won the event, as England's Peter Costa took down the top prize. Since 2002, the Aussie Millions has been held each year in January, moving the tournament to the summer (likely with the hopes of attracting players from the United States and Europe, who are in the midst of winter at that time of the year). For instance, if a casino has a 96.5% payout percentage, it means that you get 96.5 cents back for each dollar that you wager at the casino.
